Communication Matters, LLC Insurance Policy

Communication Matters, LLC does not directly bill private insurance companies. Instead, private pay is accepted. This affords the speech-language pathologist more time with clients and helps keep service fees to a minimum. Payment for service is due at the time of the visit and is accepted in the form of cash, check, or PayPal.

If you wish to bill your insurance company:

- Communication Matters, LLC will provide a superbill of the services rendered that includes the necessary codes for requesting reimbursement from the insurance company.
- Contact your insurance company first. Ask about the plan's benefits regarding "out-of-network providers" for speech-language services and any specific procedures for submitting for reimbursement. This information varies from one insurance company and plan to another.
- Request a reimbursement/medical claim form from the insurance company to complete and attach to the superbill for submission.

I have read and understand Communication Matters, LLC's insurance policy and accept all terms and conditions.
